Choke Chain by Jason Donald 12 year old Alex and his younger brother Kevin Thorne are a pair of brothers growing up in 1980s South Africa. They are poor but white and although the book is set pre the breakdown of apartheid their world is changing.

BOOK REVIEW: Choke Chain by Jason Donald - storgy.com

Choke Chain by Jason Donald has a long emotional reach. Set in 1980's apartheid South Africa it narrates the Thorne's dysfunctional family life with clarity and compassion. Domesticity, gender politics and inequality are explored kitchen-sink style in this simmering story where two brothers, Alex, aged twelve, and Kevin, eight, grow up in poverty with an abusive dad to boot. Whilst the two

Choke Chain by Jason Donald Reviewer: JJ Marsh What we thought: Against a background of apartheid South Africa, Alex's family are poor and helpless. But white. That means their father Bruce gets to be a brute through no other qualification than his skin colour and sense of entitlement. For a teenage boy attempting to comprehend power and social structure, his father is a role model. JJ Alex
