World War I dramatized the power and triumphs of propaganda. And both fascism and communism in the postwar years were the centers of intense revolutionary propaganda. After capturing office, both fascists and communists sought to extend their power beyond their own national borders through the use of propaganda.

Absolute power corrupts absolutely, says just about everybody who can't think of their own damn line. But cliched as it may be, it's usually true, especially in these ten cases. When nobody has the ability to overrule a psychopath with power, everybody loses. Except the psychopaths, who tend to do OK in such cases.

Propaganda in Nazi Germany - History Learning Site
Propaganda is the art of persuasion persuading others that your side of the story is correct. Propaganda might take the form of persuading others that your military might is too great to be challenged; that your political might within a nation is too great or popular to challenge etc.

History of propaganda - Wikipedia

Propaganda is information that is not impartial and used primarily to influence an audience and further an agenda, often by presenting facts selectively (perhaps lying by omission) to encourage a particular synthesis, or using loaded messages to produce an emotional rather than a rational response to the information presented.

Yeah it is kinda true here in Brazil, though I don't see it very often where I live. A lot of people also understand that as OK too. Anyway, the sign we use instead is the raised thumb. :D 16:50, 7 March 2006 (UTC)

Who are some of Europe's more "badass" rulers? :
history

I read an alt-history series called 1632 by Eric Flint. Gustavus Adolphus is a main character, and a real badass. Gustavus Adolphus is a main character, and a real badass. I also recently bought Sid Meyer's Civilization V, and he's one of the leaders.
